

Tontine Hotel

6 Ardgowan Square
Greenock

INFORMATION

The Tontine Hotel is a well-known local establishment,
situated in the West End of Greenock & owned by a local family.

Our beautiful 200 year old Georgian townhouse hotel is rich in stunning character and history with original features.

The front of House has a pleasant outlook on the Ardgowan bowling green and the trees and houses which surround it, while from the back a fine view may be obtained of the River Clyde.

It is a fine example of architecture, and has some resemblance to the Mansion House of Ardgowan. It was built as family residence by the late Mr George Robertson about the year 1808, and is one of the oldest family mansions in Greenock.

The architect who designed it is unknown, but the general design and interior plaster work of the hotel forms a very interesting and valuable specimen of the style of the world famous Brothers Adam.

The details of the cornices, and other interiors decorations are so good and pure in the 'Adam' style that there is a great probability of the ornaments being made out of moulds designed by them.

After the death of Mr. Robertson in 1828, the house was occupied by his son, and subsequently by other well-known Greenock gentlemen.

In the year 1892 it was acquired by Mrs. Buchanan for the purpose of a hotel, and proved exceedingly popular from its inauguration.

To this day the Tontine Hotel welcomes guests from around the world to stay in its fine premier bedrooms, for leisure or for business, and caters for family gatherings all year round.
